

Professional Placements

www.education.monash.edu.au

Monash University's Faculty of Education is seeking new schools to participate in our professional placements program for education students.

As pre-service teachers, our students require placements ranging from five days over a fortnight to 5 days per week for 5 weeks, or even a full year's placement in their final year.

Here are five good reasons for your school to become involved with student placements:

- Your school can become an active participant in the development of teaching as a profession
- Students bring new energy and enthusiasm to classrooms
- Every school is unique. Introduce students to a new range of opportunities and challenges
- Engagement with pre-service teachers enables established teachers to reflect critically on their own practice
- Schools identify and recruit new staff after seeing students' abilities in the classroom

What our students say

Bryan Davidson-Blue holds a Graduate Diploma of Education (Secondary). In 2007, he undertook placement experience at Lynall Hall Community School in Richmond.

"My time spent at Lynall Hall was brief but solidified my personal teaching philosophy and the value of education. Education is the strongest weapon, it allows freedom. These students question authority, and rightly so. Once they realised how shared our goals were then I was accepted in to their community and valued each moment."
